Jim Ingold wins tenth Run

While bemused and somewhat sleepy patrons wandered about the first Farmers Market of the season at the Capital Square last Saturday, more than 1,900 athletes lined up at the Hamilton Street corner to—what else—run from Madison to Stoughton.

And with very little of the confusion one might expect from trying to get such a large group ready to begin a 20 mile run, the gun had sounded and the tenth annual Syttende Mai runners were on their way out of town—but only after a lap around the Square.

For the next four hours, runners were scattered along the rolling countryside between Madison and Stoughton. Some fell victim to the mid-80's temperatures and the high humidity, but by about 12:30 p.m. 1713 runners had crossed the line in Mandt Park.

Although first place finisher Jim Ingold, 25, of Monroe fell short of the Syttende Mai course record of 1:42:20, his finish at 1:45:30 was 47 seconds better than the second place finisher, James Drews of Green Bay.

Last year's record setter and the winner of the 1979 race as well, Tom Antczak of La Crosse finished ninth at 1:46:17.

Ingold, who is a physical education teacher in Monroe, said "the last five miles were pretty hard. My wind was good but my whole body was just dead."

He won the "Crazylegs Run" in Madison last month. Ingold said he had not run a race of this length before, although he had participated in half-marathons.

"After about four miles I pulled away" from the pack, he said. "I thought it might have been a dumb move," he added because no other runners had broken away.

Ingold was the third runner from Monroe to win the Syttende Mai race. Mark Glessner was first two years ago and Dan Winzenried won the first race.

The finishers in the women's division were not as close, with former U.W. track team star Marybeth Spencer of Madison a first place finisher by 6 minutes, with 2:03:36.

"Marybeth ran a fantastic race," race co-director Ed Hutchins said.

"I'm very pleased with the way the race ran this year," Hutchins said. He said that the problems expected by the heat were not severe for many runners. About 40 were observed by area medical personnel for various reasons.

"Had this race been run in that kind of weather five years ago, they would have flooded the hospitals," Hutchins added, saying that runners are much smarter now.

Of the runners seeking aid, about 20 were given intravenous fluid replacement. "The people running the aid stations really helped," Hutchins said. Runners were offered water, fluid replacer and squirts from hoses at the stations located throughout the course. A number of EMS vehicles were standing by to aid runners disabled on the course.

Although the course was changed to what is generally thought to be a more hilly one, Hutchins said the times were not affected by that so much as by the weather.

Runners were happy with the new lap around the square that allowed them to stretch out before the Hamilton street hill, Hutchins said.

The congestion problem found at the finish area in the past was avoided by moving the line deeper into Mandt Park.

Keeping pace with the many veteran runners on Saturday were three very young Stoughton runners. Eric Jacobson, age 10, ran an excellent race and finished with a time of 3:01:09. Farther back were Dorian W. Thorsen, 9, and Atsuko E. Zuck, 11, both of Stoughton who ran together and finished the race with a time of 4:19:52 and 4:19:53, respectively.

Of the runners from Stoughton entered in the race, Ken Kiss, 21, was first in the men's division with his time of 2:01:51. He placed 45th over all. Kathy Soderbloom was first of the Stoughton women to cross the line, with her time of 2:39:19.

STOUGHTON — They weren't the first, and they weren't the last in Saturday's 20-mile Syttende Mai race. But Dorian Thorsen, 9, and Atsuko Zuck, 11, have this distinction: they were the two youngest finishers.

The pair reached the finish line at 4 hours, 19:52 seconds, and 4 hours, 19:53, respectively.

Dorian and Atsuko are neighbors on Quinn Lane in Stoughton. "I was running and she said I am going to run the Syttende Mai race and I said I am going to do it, too," Dorian said, explaining how the two teamed up.

Sometimes running together and sometimes talking over individual runs, the two trained for the big day. "I would run a couple of miles after school every day," Dorian said. His longest training run before the race was six miles, according to his mother, Sandy Thompson.

During the race the two runners noticed the heat and the hills, but they were encouraged by a relative of Atsuko's, who followed them on a bike and monitored their physical conditions. With some kick left, the two sprinted from the edge of Stoughton to the finish line.

Atsuko, daughter of Jean and Dennis Zuck, "loves the outdoors. She just tries anything and everything," her mother said.

The next youngest female finisher was 16. Anyone under 18 must show written permission from parent or guardian to run the race.

Dorian, son of David and Sandy Thompson, ran 10 miles in last year's Syttende Mai when he was 8. Dorian's running has been influenced by his brother Aaron, who is on the Stoughton High School cross-country team, and third grade teacher Steve Sheski, who encouraged Dorian to run.

When asked why he decided to run in this year's event Dorian said, "I didn't finish it last year."

Atsuko also is interested in music, playing violin and clarinet and participating in chorus. Dorian's other interests include drawing and water skiing.

Dorian said he would like to win the Syttende Mai run someday and maybe enter some similar races in Oregon.

Now Dorian and his partner have a head start.

Stoughton can be so darn far

On 364 days of every year, Mandt Park in Stoughton is a nice city park, complete with trees, softball diamonds, and a swimming hole.

But for one day out of every year, the park takes on an entirely different look for an ever-increasing amount of people. Last Saturday was that one day of 1982, and for about 1,700 persons, myself included, Mandt Park resembled something out of a John Denver song.

The Capitol Square in Madison is also a pleasant place, especially in the spring when the trees and flowers are blooming. Then the square is full of the sound of birds chirping and of the fragrant scent of colorful flowers.

But for one day out of every year, the Square takes on an entirely different look for an ever-increasing amount of people. Last Saturday was that one day of 1982, and for nearly 2,000 persons, myself included, the Capitol Square resembled mass chaos and smelled even worse, with Ben Gay and liniment replacing the fragrance of Mother Nature.

The Capitol Square and Mandt Park do not have much in common. They are miles apart (20 to be exact), and the happenings at them involve two different worlds.

But once every year that ever-increasing lot of people assembles at the Square with one sole purpose — to run to Mandt Park as fast as they can.

Rephrased, it is called the Syttende Mai race. I have my own name for it, but that will have to do.

The race is part of the Syttende Mai festivities in Stoughton, that little community that lies 20 miles, and 32 hills (give or take a few) southeast of Madison. The weekend long festival is in celebration of Norway gaining its independence from Sweden in 1914. Some way to celebrate.

This year, 1,917 runners began the race. While 203 of them fell victim to the hills and extreme heat along the way, 1,716 of them had trained hard enough to reach Mandt Park. Undoubtedly, the park looked as beautiful to them as it did to me.

Since I ran the race last year, I figured this time around I'd train perfectly and improve on my 1981 time of 2 hours, 31 minutes. But the only proper training I did was my carbohydrate loading before the race.

I ran off and on for a few months before the race, finally getting serious about it four weeks ago. Still, I missed enough running days that I wasn't sure if I could even finish this year.

Last Thursday, I got in a good five-hour training day, which I knew would ready me for something. Five hours of doing nothing but eating pasta and drinking beer usually does.

The night before the race, I heard a weatherman say that temperatures in the 70s were expected by the starting time. Temperatures over 65 degrees can be deadly to long distance runners, but I didn't worry. The weatherman is always wrong.

Well, the weatherman was wrong. It was hotter at race time than predicted. And as the 1,917 runners with their fresh slabs of Ben Gay lined up on the Square, it seemed the temperature rose to 100.

Probably the most interesting part of the race is the start. I was surrounded by people from all walks of life, including a boy who couldn't have been more than 12 years old, a 60 year old man, two young women who looked ready for the beach, and a group of five men with wings on their hats and uff-da written on their shirts.

Conceding that I wouldn't win the race, last year I lined up near the back. When the gun sounded, I wasn't able to move for quite some time and ran a nine minute first mile.

This year, race officials thought it would be nice to go around the Square once before heading for Stoughton, I guess to alleviate congestion. Good planning. I ran my first mile in 10:30.

Fortunately, things thinned out once we hit John Nolen Drive and I was able to run my second mile in 6:10. Then I remembered what kind of shape I was in and I locked into a pace of seven minutes per mile.

The heat wasn't much of a factor until near the five mile mark, where the worst hill on the course lies. Going up, it felt like running in a car trunk — it was hot.

Fittingly, one of the water stations had a sign labeling it an oasis. It couldn't have been better put. Even though a slight breeze helped cut down on sweating, dehydration was a big factor. I took water at every station (about seven) and never passed up the opportunity to get hosed down.

Just about every turn on the course was lined with 25-50 people waiting for friends and loved ones to go by. But they usually applauded constantly as stream of runners passed. The applause is invigorating, though after a while you become oblivious to it.

The entire course has a certain sameness to it, so it is hard to describe. It seemed every mile had one big hill, a long flat stretch and a turn.

I was going strong until the 15th mile when my thighs started to tighten up. Since I had a good time going, I figured I would try to dismiss the pain and go on. But 100 yards later, I slackened my pace until the pain was bearable.

The best looking mile marker in the whole race was No. 17. Once past there, the course turned east onto Wisconsin 138, which heads straight into Stoughton. Runners who had energy left to talk at that point let out yells. I was not among them.

Main Street. While the streets are lined with party goers drinking beer and eating brats, for one of the first times in my life neither appealed to me. All I could think of was water and lying down. And I knew the quickest way to get both was to finish the race.

When Mandt Park was finally in sight, I tried to accelerate and run the last three blocks. That was a mistake. My legs had taken all the beating they could, and I instantly pulled my right calf and left thigh muscles so severely that I wondered if I'd make it.

But I limped in with a group of runners who looked as bad off as I did, crossing the finish line in 2:32.31, good for 522nd place, or thereabouts.

Shortly after the race, before I had regained my composure, someone passing out information for another race tried to hand me a leaflet. I told them I'd never run again.

But you know, 15 minutes later, I was talking to a friend of mine how next year I'll be in good shape and...

STOUGHTON — When the gun sounded to start the Syttende Mai 20-mile road race Saturday morning, over 1,900 runners nudged and elbowed their way around the Capitol Square. But 1 hour, 45 minutes, 30 seconds later, Jim Ingold of Monroe had little company when he crossed the finish line at Mandt Park in Stoughton to win the 10th annual event.

Ingold, 25, was considerably off the Syttende Mai record of 1:42.20, but in Saturday's warm, humid temperatures, his pace was good enough to outdistance runner-up John Drew, who finished 47 seconds back with a time of 1:46.17.

Tom Antczak, the 1979 and '81 champion who set the race record en route to last year's title, was ninth with a time of 1:51.31.

Marybeth Spencer, a former University of Wisconsin track standout, finished 59th overall to take the women's crown with a time of 2:03.36. Her time, too, was well off the record women's pace of 2:13.22, but enough to beat Kathy Kapalin of Green Bay, who finished 10 minutes back at 2:13.22.

From a spectator's point of view, Saturday was a perfect day to sit back, relax and take in a little sunshine while watching the many brave souls tackle the Syttende Mai (17th of May) race, which kicks off Stoughton's celebration commemorating the signing of Norway's constitution in 1814. But for the 1,716 runners who officially finished the race, the weather was murder.

"Right at four miles, I could feel the heat already," said Ingold, a teacher at Monroe Elementary School. "Then, in the open areas, the wind started to wear me down."

Ingold said he heard the weather reports the night before and consumed a lot of water so he wouldn't be dehydrated, but it was water that almost cost Ingold the race.

"I thought I was in trouble at 12 miles when I grabbed some water and it went down the wrong pipe," Ingold explained. "I started coughing and then I got a cramp on my side. I thought it was over then, but I shook it off about a mile later."

Despite the problem, Ingold was in control almost the entire race, taking the lead at the four-mile mark and holding it from then on.

"At four miles, I got the lead on John Vodacek (who finished fifth) and from there I held a lead of about three blocks," Ingold said. "But when you look back, it seems a lot farther than it really is."

Spencer, 24, who finished fourth in the women's open field last year, also felt the heat, but negotiated the hilly course just the same.

"I was pleased, very pleased, but I was afraid of the heat. Everyone was cautious," said Spencer. "The course is tough because it's got 10 miles of hill in the middle. But if you go 15 (miles), you figure you've got to finish."

"On a hot day like today, you just aim to finish and be alive, and I'm both."

Lorraine Moller, a native of New Zealand who has finished as the top woman in this event the last three years, didn't run Saturday after running the London Marathon last weekend.

Besides Spencer, several other Madison runners fared well. Jack Lefcowitz of Madison won the 55-59 men's division in 2:23.37, while Beverle Lamp of Monona won the women's 50-plus title in 2:31.08.

Tom Gabriel of Madison finished second in the men's 35-39 age group in 1:58.36, Morton Gurtin finished third in the men's 45-49 in 2:10.26, and Tom McCarthy was runner-up in men's 55-59 in 2:17.40. Madison's Sue Peters finished second in women's 30-39 in 2:21.09, and Susan Boyd was second in women's 40-49 in 2:31.48.

Also noteworthy was the performance of 10-year-old Eric Jacobson, who was pleased with his time of 3:02.09, good for a 1,312th-place finish.

"I beat my record by 15 minutes," said Eric, the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Jacobson of Stoughton. "I never stopped once. I just slowed down to get water."

Jacobson said he has run several road runs, and Saturday was his third Syttende Mai.

"I used to watch it every year, and then my dad said, 'Why don't you try it,' so I did," Eric said.

Eric didn't finish that race in 1980. He could handle only fifteen miles at the age of eight.

Last year "unidentified" runners were included in the results. In some cases these were legitimate registered finishers who could not be identified because they had lost their number, a finish official recorded a duplicate or incorrect number, etc. In other cases, they were unregistered runners who crossed the finish line.

This year the finishing times of unidentified runners are not included because of the change in computerized processing that required a runner's number for every recorded finish time. We are already working on ways to improve the accuracy of the results and the timeliness of these results for next year. Thank you for your patience and understanding.
